PROP OF THE MONTH IS

ARMOR

Below is Lucy as Lysia the Amazon Enforcer in “Hercules and the Amazon Women” HM1

This is an interesting piece because it was worn by Lucy in her very first appearance in the first Movie of Hercules Legendary Journeys. This would make it the oldest Lucy wardrobe piece between the Hercules and Xena series!

Please contact Suzy if you have any questions or comments daxowench@aol.com

1. Evil Xena body armor from Hercules including the upper claw shoulder armor. This is one of two made and Lucy was wearing one of them when she had the horseback riding accident on the Leno set in Burbank back in 1996. The wardrobe was destroyed when it was cut-off her by the hospital medics at St. Joseph's hospital so this would be the only one now that is complete.

OWNED BY MART BURROW x 3

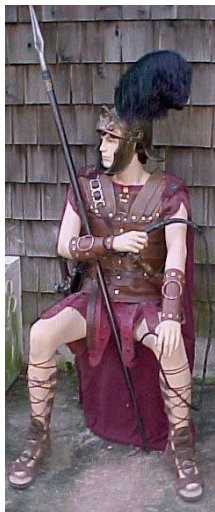

Here is armor from Hercules that does not go together...although they do look good together...the leather body/chest armor is labeled twice, one name is 'Tarkon', it was first used in Hercules episode "Let the Games Begin" and he was the warlord who didn't like the start of the Olympics....but it did not have the satin and velvet cape at that point...so it may have been added when they added the 2nd name Pannus. While doing research Mart found that the Pannus name does not appear on whoosh episode guide. Mart did a little research in greek mythology and Pannus is also known as Perceus which we know that name from the ' Clash of the Titans' movie and he was Zeus' half human son that killed the Medusa. The gauntlets are labeled 'Pannus' also, but nothing else has a label so it is a mixed warrior outfit. The spear was used by Ares' army throughout XWP/Herc history.

4. Lucy's charioteer costume from God You Know X 6 E 12. Costume includes floor length black dress with gold painted detail at hem and side slits, black leather corset armor with side laces and gold resin and metal armor and attached black fabric cape with gold painted trim, black leather belt with "petals" with gold resin armor and studs, leather boots with studs, fingerless leather gloves.

5. Caesar's sometimes ally, sometimes enemy, Pompey the Great armor. Also owns the entire costume which includes this armor fashioned of leather and resin along with trousers, shirt, Roman skirt, gauntlets, sandals, greaves, bandolier and round fibula broach.

The Myth of Pandora

Pandora's box seen in X 1 E 4 'Cradle of Hope'

By Chris Clogston

This article is in two very distinct parts. The first part is a rendering of the myth of Pandora in the style of an encyclopedia. The second part is an imaginal re-telling of the myth from the point of view of Pandora herself.

Part 1: The Myth of Pandora

Hesiod writes two versions of his creation story of Pandora, and in both Pandora's story is intrinsically connected to the myth of Prometheus, who stole fire from the Gods and gave it to mankind. In Works and Days, Hesiod writes that Zeus was very angry with Prometheus for providing fire to men and determined to punish mankind. He asked Hephaestus to create a woman from clay in the form of a goddess and give her physical strength and the ability to speak (Hesiod 38). He asked the other Olympians to give this creation gifts as well. Aphrodite gave her beauty with an unsatisfied and obsessive personality. Athene taught her various crafts, including weaving, and dressed her in a beautiful gown. Hermes gave the woman the gift of lies and cunning. And because the Gods gave her these gifts, Hermes named her Pandora, which meant 'Allgift' (Hesiod 39).

Hephaestus metal sword owned by Mart burrow sword breaks the chains on Prometheus Xena Episode "Prometheus" X 1 E 8

But Pandora was a bane rather than a gift to Prometheus' brother, Epimetheus, and a gift accepted against his brother's advice. Mankind was literally so, as there were no women; Pandora is the first of womankind, dazzling Epimetheus and the other men with her beautiful appearance.

Hesiod doesn't tell us where the forbidden jar came from or who created it (notice that there is no box, but a jar, a more common container type at the time). Pandora, out of curiosity, opens the jar and releases all of the ills now known to humankind (Hesiod 39). She shuts the lid of the jar, trapping only Hope in its interior, and Hesiod says this is why Hope is with us today (Hesiod 40). This is odd logic, as Hope should have also been released for it to enter the world. As in the biblical story of Adam and Eve, the first woman is blamed for the misery of the human race because she exercised her curiosity.

In his Theogony, Hesiod reports that Pandora was also adorned with a fantastic crown made by Hephaestus, a crown decorated with designs that seemed to be living animals of the earth and ocean, each with the ability to vocalize (Hesiod 20). Pandora's physical appearance and beauty stunned both Gods and men and the suggestion is that she was perhaps more beautiful than the Olympian goddesses.

But in this version, there is no jar of curses to open, only the misery of men saddled with women, who consume the fruits of male labor. He compares women with drones and men with the industrious honeybee, clearly not understanding that drones are actually male and the honey-making hive is populated with only female bees (Hesiod 21). Hesiod's description of woman is as an insatiable stomach that consumes the fruit of men's labor, explicitly "pile the toil of others into their own bellies" (Hesiod 21). Hesiod goes further and describes the life of a man with a good wife is still unhappy "with bad competing constantly with good" and a man with a bad wife is even more miserable, experiencing "unrelenting pain in heart and spirit, an ill without a cure" (Hesiod 21).

In Hesiod's misogynistic view, woman is at best a dependent creature unable to contribute to society, and at worst plagues man with her unhappy nature, and may be seen as a commentary on contemporary Greek social notions of the roles of men and women.

Zeus seen in "God Fearing Child" X 5 E

Part 2: I, Pandora

I, Pandora, am old now, well past the time when one would expect to still be living, if we understood such things. Now, as at other times in the past, I dwell on the events immediately following my first consciousness, my creation, my birth, if you will. I've been told the story many times: I was created by the Gods out of the earth as a gift to the Fire-Stealer's brother, my husband Epimetheus.

The first person I saw when I opened my eyes for the first time was a God, a bearded older man who moved with a pronounced limping gait and always carried a small iron tool in one hand or the other: Hephaestus. He never seemed to without at least a hammer, or chisel, or other hand tool. Always working, always banging away, creating the next wonderful thing for himself or one of the other Gods. There were others in the room as well, all with a familiarity with each other, other Gods, family members as I later learned, the children of Zeus.

I don't remember my first breath, but there was earth still clinging to my body when I pulled my way out of the ground. Standing in Hephaestus' workshop, nude, I was able to speak, making sounds, but had no language until a young man, who seemed to glide through the air rather than walk, waved a serpent-decorated staff in my direction. I suddenly understood the conversation filling the air and I became curious about all of these proceedings. He was Hermes, Zeus' messenger, carrying his caduceus.

A beautiful woman, Aphrodite I now know, glided to my side, cupped my face with both her hands and smiled. After a time, she removed her hands and the look on the Lame God's face told me that I was more than pleasing to look upon.

Another woman, one with bright eyes, Athene, I later learned, clothed me in a white gown and adorned my head with a veil covered in beautiful embroideries. Athene taught me several household skills, including weaving, which she seemed to enjoy immensely. We spent quite some time at the loom.

When I was presented to the group of men and Gods, I could see the look in their eyes, and several sharp intakes of breath could be heard. No one tried to hide their stares. I was presented to Epimetheus by Hermes, who also stared, but held out his hand to me and I took it. When my hand closed in his, I could hear distant laughter in the clouds, and I somehow knew that Zeus was pleased.

Epimetheus and I made a life together. I believe that he loved me, in his way, even though he felt tricked by Zeus by forgetting his brother's advice. Over the years he seemed to forget how I came into his life and I think he was happy in our marriage, or was, until another story about me began to circulate through the city.

I am blamed now for all the ills experienced by mortals, as if one person could possibly be the cause of such misery. I am a convenient scapegoat for both men and the Gods. They keep forgetting that I am the First Woman, the original mother and instead keep telling a story about a jar that supposedly contained all of the world's ills. A jar that I was supposed to have opened and caused all of these ills to escape into the world. To this day, I am baffled... what jar? What did it look like? Where was it kept? Somewhere, there was supposed to have been a particularly special jar, a jar that contained not wine or oil, but illness, strife, banes of all sorts, curses, and even death. What kind of jar could hold such things, if such things could be held? This story has become very popular to tell children, as a morality tale cautioning against over-eager curiosity. Yet even so, the people of Athens put a statue of me near Athena's temple.

And how I hate the virtuous, suffering Prometheus! He never let me forget that he had warned his brother about me. Feh! As if my appearance was of my own doing. As if I could follow anything but my own nature. Once again, Prometheus places the blame on the wrong person, not wanting to take any responsibility for his own actions. Was I responsible for his tricking Zeus with the false burnt sacrifice? Was I responsible for hiding fire in fennel stalks and giving it to mortal men? Did I make Zeus angry in these ways? I was the result of Zeus' anger, his agent of revenge, but it was Prometheus and his kin who put the events in motion.

My husband, Epimetheus is dead many years now, but our children and our children's children are abundant. If he were alive he would enjoy the attention of several generations of our family, each more numerous than the one before it. Zeus gave us a prolific gift in childbearing, something else for Prometheus to be angry about. I predict that our family will soon outnumber the men created by Prometheus, a very large family indeed.

It is difficult for me to go out, to visit the marketplace, to walk in the public gardens, without being cursed or given the sign of the evil eye. And yet I am the mother of all women and without me there would be no children of our own, only more men made by Prometheus, as before. Stupidly, they don't see the truth. From my perspective, opening the jar was inevitable, as vengeful Zeus had planned all along, because once I opened my legs to my husband, the jar was opened. Once we consummated our marriage, we became more than Prometheus' mud-creatures, more than artifacts from a god's hands; we were suddenly alive, in the true sense, no longer needing the gods to create more of us. Zeus knew this and relished the advent of Prometheus' anger once he understood what Zeus had taken from him. We became capable of growing old, experiencing illness, dying, and most importantly, bearing children, especially female children.

You see, I was the jar.

Xena Prop Donation Helped Homeless Animals

Duffy a lucky little 8 year old Yorkiepoo, has been with Deb Deguston and her partner, Pat, for over a year now, after being rescued from the streets of NYC. Deb got him after Katrina hit last year, about six months after losing their Yorkie, Percy to an illness. Deb was on the Board of a no-kill animal shelter in her hometown of Northern NJ, so when Katrina hit, she and the volunteers were understandably concerned about the homeless pets. Deb decided to auction off some items on e Bay to donate proceeds for animal rescue groups down South, one of which was the "Bomb" prop in episode "Chakram" X 5 E 2 seen used by Gabrielle and Amarice.

I, Barbie Arms purchased the bomb prop with Buy It Now for $150 and proceeds went to the homeless animals of Hurricane Katrina through eBay giving works. Deb's generosity doesn't stop there she will be donating another exciting item to Xena Prop House proceeds to go to Renee O'Connor's favorite charity The Alisa Ann Ruch Burn Foundation. It is a helmet seen in X 4 E 5 "A Good Day" and it will be auctioned for the Ausxip Charity Auction in Decmber.

Broadway Cares is a wonderful Charity that is also dear to Lucy's heart along with Starship and Xena Prop House will be running auctions for this charity so please watch for those under eBay member name inthelightofthemoon2. Broadway Barks an extension of Broadway Cares is also a non-profit to help the homeless animals in the streets of NYC.

Broadway Cares/Equity Fights AIDS (BC/EFA) is the nation's leading industry-based, not-for-profit AIDS fundraising and grant making organization. BC/EFA is the on-going, committed response from the American Theatre community to an urgent worldwide health crisis. By drawing upon the talents, resources, and generosity of this community, BC/EFA raises funds for AIDS-related causes across the United States. Since its founding in 1988, BC/EFA has raised over $100 million for critically needed services for people with AIDS, HIV or HIV-related illnesses

Tedra makes fantastic books and Journals, the craftsmanship is stunning and her work is one of a kind. Every crafted item is never exactly duplicated so your personal purchase would be a rare and one off piece. We will feature a few examples of her work in every issue. Please check website www.fineblankbooks.com to see more of Tedra's work. You can also email Tedra at tedra@fineblankbooks.com if you would like her to do a special project for you. Prices correlate to extremely high quality books and journals and boxes.

CLAMSHELL BOX BY T. ASHLEY

This is a tiny little clamshell box Tedra made to hold two of the Xena costume rings. These rings held Xena's bodice to her bodice straps. Tedra bought a bag of these from someone who had bought them in a lot of costume department items at the Turner's auction. This little box has one of Xena's real skirt petals on the front. The pillow inside is made from her real black/gold underskirt fabric on one side, and her real bodice leather on the other side. Under the rings and the pillow is a pull-out accordion that states what the materials are that were used in this box and where they came from. The box is only about 3" square.

Magnets and Novelties by Velda

Looking for that special little gift for your Xena friends?
Here are some charming polymer clay items by Velda

Interesting description of her process

After kneading the polymer clay I place it through a pasta machine. This helps to condition the clay, and gives me a nice even surface to work from. Each piece is hand made, no moulds involved at all so no two items are quite the same. I use a card template for the Sword & Sais, to give me the basic shape.

For the others I usually trace the picture straight onto the clay as these have a little more detail to them. Once I have a full tray of approx. 8 or 9 items, I then paint them. For the bladed items & Chakrams, I use two layers of paint, as the silver, gold & bronze metallic paints are quite transparent. Once the paint is dry, I then add the Swarovski crystals, as the inlays for the Chakram, Sword & Scabbard. All items are then cooked for approx 30 minutes. Once everything has cooled down, I sand off any rough edges, and give them another coat of paint if they need it.

Then it's time to paint the underside of each item, when all painting is finished & dry, I glaze/varnish each item. Then comes all the leather work, & finally I add the tiny Neodymium magnets, which are pretty powerful for their size. Each item is signed by myself and I will be making 100 of each. That item will then be retired. There are a few other things I do to create these magnets, but I don't want to give away all my secrets.

Keychains

Free Standing Staff

If you wish to purchase any of these items, I sell them on a regular basis on e bay every fortnight under the ID of starwarriorbabe. Unfortunately due to health problems, I can't take bulk orders.

By making them at my own pace, and selling them on e bay I'm not letting you wonderful Xena fans down.
